Web Development

New student admissions for Summer 2026 are open.

2-Week Course

This is a two-week program where you'll focus on one course for the entire duration.

Program Highlights

- Understand the evolution of the Internet and the basis of how it works
- Identify the workflow used when working with a client
- Use HTML and CSS to build websites
- Build responsive, accessible websites following best practices
- Research and compare different creative solutions currently being used in the field
- Apply newfound knowledge by creating a unique website which is made live and shareable

2026 Dates

- Session 1: July 5 - July 17

Academic Program Overview

Learn how to develop responsive and accessible websites.

Web Development & Design explores the development of websites in a client-based scenario. In this course, students will use a variety of web development production tools and processes, following the best practices in the industry, to build websites that are accessible, user-friendly, and responsive for usability on different devices. Group and individual activities will guide the exploration process, and students will exhibit learned skills through developing their own basic website in which they will upload files and generate a URL for sharing with others.

Excursions

Students will meet with local web development firms and speak professionals in the industry.

Instructor

April Elliott, Lecturer at Cal Poly SLO

April Elliott is a Graphic Communications department Cal Poly alumnus where she earned her Master of Arts in Education with specialization in Curriculum and Instruction. April's specialty is graphic design using the Adobe Creative Suite. She has worked as a graphic designer designing the graphics for screen printing and embroidery at J. Carroll Corporation.
