Politics, Policy & Government Infosheet

New student admissions for
Summer 2025 are open.

Program Highlights

- Learn about the role that political parties, public opinion, and special interest groups can have on shaping behavior and policies at the federal, state, and local levels.
- Partake in a Senate simulation where you will champion your ideas and passions into legislation to become law, moving it from Committee to the Senate floor.
- Visit policymakers and think tanks to learn more about careers in the field

2025 Dates

Georgetown

- Session 1: June 29 - June 11

Academic Program Overview

In the first class, students will break into campaign teams as they become immersed in a presidential election. Students will be divided into the following groups: candidates, campaign managers, senior policy advisors, speech writers, media outlets, and swing states. Over the course of the week, they will strategize a plan to secure votes for their candidate before they ultimately elect a new president. During the second week, students will take on the role of US lawmakers as they draft legislation and push for it to become law. Along the way, students will have to overcome lobbyists, PAC influence, and a House vote, as well as convince the newly elected President to sign the bill. By using an experiential learning approach, students will quickly engage in these topics, and the instructor introduces the underlying theory and concepts as students tackle these issues while pushing their political agenda.

Excursions

Last summer, our students embarked on an unforgettable journey that took them to the Eisenhower Executive Office Building (EEOB) on the White House campus. There, they had the privilege of participating in an engaging roundtable discussion with prominent leaders, including Asma Mirza, Chief Performance Officer for the State of Maryland, and Dhuah Baig, a Foreign Affairs Officer at the U.S. Department of State. They also met with a representative from the Domestic Policy Council. In addition, the students had the opportunity to meet with senators, tour the Capitol, and explore Capitol Hill.

Instructor

Nicholas Ferroni

Meet Nicholas Ferroni, a nationally recognized educator and social activist known for his dedication to inspiring students and sparking conversations about education reform. Acknowledged as the "upstander of the year" by the Human Rights Campaign, Nicholas champions inclusivity and diversity, integrating minority voices into curriculum and highlighting civil rights movements. With innovative teaching methods and advocacy efforts featured on national platforms like ABC's 'The View' and MSNBC, Nicholas fosters supportive environments, co-founding his school's Gay Straight Alliance and Feminist Club. His infectious enthusiasm continues to make a lasting impact on the next generation.
