Summer Springboard is recruiting an innovative and dynamic individual to design and deliver a hands-on course in Psychology & Neuroscience for our pre-college summer programs for high school students. The curriculum is yours to create and facilitate. We have a few caveats: namely that the students are challenged to think critically and creatively about the connection between the brain and human behavior. Ideally, there is a hands-on activity included in curriculum featuring a clinical simulation where students listen, assess, and suggest treatments for their “patients” i.e. other students. The curriculum must culminate in a project that the students will create and present at the end of their two-week session.

You will deliver the course in-person at either UC Berkeley, Yale, or UC San Diego during the summer of 2020 while the curriculum development will be done remotely at a location of your convenience. You will deliver the course in-person for the 2-week sessions from 9am-12pm daily (M-F only).

Who are we? Summer Springboard was founded to give college-bound teens a supportive environment where they can explore their personal and academic passions. Our innovative pre-college summer programs, offered at some of the nation's leading colleges and universities, combines the benefits of an academically challenging summer experience with tools and frameworks for personal leadership development and self-discovery. We're a division of Terra Education, a mission-driven Certified B-Corporation and are headquartered in San Diego, CA.

Compensation: Competitive Stipend, Daily parking
